

EIRINI ZORMPA

EXPERIENCE

2016–
2020

PhD Candidate

Max Planck Institute for Psycholinguistics

📍 Nijmegen, NL

In my PhD, I research what people remember from conversations and how that changes as a result of speaking as opposed to listening. My research uses in-person and online behavioural experiments as well as eye-tracking methods.

2016

Graduate Research Assistant

Reading University

📍 Reading, UK

I worked on two projects, one on prospective memory and one on bilingualism. My responsibilities included recruiting and testing participants using EEG and transcribing narratives of Greek-English bilingual children.

2013–
2014

Teacher of English

Mingiani-Previzi Foreign Language School

📍 Serres, GR

I taught English to primary school children, aged 8 to 12. My responsibilities included developing the curriculum, delivering the classes, creating and grading tests, and communicating with the parents.

EDUCATION
